

Engineering director appointed at Joinerysoft

JOINERYSOFT has appointed Brian Workman as Engineering Director working within the development team in Somerset.

Brian joins the team at Joinerysoft with 35 years of software engineering experience at all levels in both the military and commercial sectors.

Since joining at the beginning of July he has already implemented new testing procedures that will ensure the upcoming JMS release will be as error free as possible.

His main focus is to improve the overall development environment and methodologies to ensure the final elements of JMS 4 and PRO are completed as efficiently as possible.

Asked recently how things were going he stated: "It's great to work with such an experienced and capable team who are dedicated to delivering the next generation of JMS capability."

New trade account manager at SCM

SCM Group UK is pleased to announce the appointment of Chris Jackson as its new Trade Account Manager for the SCM and Minimax ranges of Classical Woodworking Machinery, covering the UK and Ireland.

Gabriele De Col, SCM Group UK's managing director, comments: "Classical woodworking machinery is traditionally a very important sector in the wide range of machinery we supply into the market from the SCM Group. Chris will assist me in supporting our Distributor Network and he has a vast experience and knowledge of classical machinery, especially the Minimax range."

Chris Jackson started at SCM UK in 2002 in the Spares Department, progressing into the Sales and Commercial departments. He has recently been covering an area in the Home Counties promoting and selling SCM and Minimax machines and supporting all the SCM Distributors with any technical queries.

On his new position, Chris comments: "I hope to provide the SCM Distributors with excellent service and back up with any technical questions that need answering and providing the latest news on technological innovations that SCM are continually developing on their classical machine ranges, ensuring that SCM is always at the forefront in the promotion and supply of machinery to the increasingly competitive market."
